

Project Name: Intimate Partner Violence (IPV) support training and programing

Overview: More people, and esp. teens and young adults are exposed to IPV due to the stresses of the COVID pandemic. These stresses particularly in the home are important drivers for delinquency and incarceration. This safety and base training will last 26 weeks but may be attended as long as individuals feel the need for it. Focus will be on educating individuals about power and control in relationships, pre-planning responses to violent behaviors and learning strategies to combat anxiety and stress through the use of brain based behaviors .

This project goal is the improve safety and well-being outcomes for survivors of IPV and their children.

E. Responding to Public Health and Economic Impacts

This project falls into the “Domestic and Sexual Violence Services of The American Rescue Plan Act of 2021 (ARPA) and also the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA).. As the FVPSA office develops guidelines to distribute these funds, advocates expect ARPA funds to be flexible, available through FY25, not require a match, and fall within already established formulas (i.e., funds for state coalitions, set-aside funding for Indian tribes, funding for the national hotline, etc.)
